Honest Skeptics,—and Others

FAIR criticism is the counter-irritant of stagnation. Stagnation is the fruit of self-satisfaction. Self-satisfaction is born of success. A business in the flood tide of growth such as ours needs criticism-honest and friendly-to keep it in condition for continuous and cumulative success.

Nevertheless, ignorant criticism and intentional falsehood alike demand correction. Thus, when the accuracy of our Wednesday's statement, that we offered One Million Yards of Ribbons, is doubted, we reply that the statement could have been truthfully doubled by counting our combined stocks. The larger statement would have been exactly and morally true.

Still more anent this Ribbon Event. Alleged competition is often more amusing than serious. For instance, when intelligent buyers are asked to accept cotton-filled ribbons as all-silk, the fun of it all is that the dealers themselves are ignorant of the fraud. Thus comes more misinformed criticism. If there is a piece of ribbon in our stock not all-silk it is because our enemy hath sown tares.

THE marked improvement of our present trade sale of Muslin underwear over every former experience is manifest. The increased sales to the most discriminating and critical women in New York is a tribute to the superiority of both material and handicraft. These distinctions appear in the most popular priced garments. The deluge of trashy muslin underwear now in evidence makes comparison odious to the general market. The best humanitarian and sanitary conditions surround the manufacture of our entire muslin underwear offer-
